Sustainable livelihood for small farmers

1646. SHRI KALRAJ MISHRA: Will the Minister of COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY be pleased to state:

(a) whether any representation was received from the group of farmers who took part in a parallel "peoples camp" in Hong Kong during the recent WTO Ministerial meeting seeking Government's intervention to protect sustainable livelihood for small farmers in the context of the WTO negotiations;

(b) if so, the nature and extent of protection sought for small farmers; and

(c) what is Government's reaction thereto?

THE MINISTER OF STATE IN THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, MINISTRY OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY (SHRI JAIRAM RAMESH): (a) and (b) A number of representations were received from group of farmers and NGOs in connection with the Hong Kong Ministerial in December, 2005.

Essentially they emphasized that agriculture is a major source of livelihood for Indian farmers and their interests should be protected from the unfair agriculture trade practices adopted by developed countries, which could compound the woes of Indian farmers. They advocated adequate protection to safeguard the interests of the Indian farmers.

(c) Government is fully aware of the concerns of Indian farmers and accordingly took a strong and principled stand during the Hong Kong Ministerial to safeguard their interests. India took a conscious position that the developing countries cannot be asked to reduce their agriculture tariffs as long as the developed countries continue to subsidize the domestic produce of their farmers and also extend export subsidies to them.

The issue was also collectively raised with like-minded countries that form the G-20 and G-33 Group. Consequently, the Hong Kong Ministerial Declaration recognized the right of developing countries to self-designate an appropriate number of tariff lines as Special Products with a view to ensuring their food security, livelihood security and rural development needs. On these lines, zero or a minimal tariff reduction would be undertaken. Developing country members will also have a right to take recourse to a Special Safeguard Mechanism to guard against surge in volume of imports and also against price depressions.

Also, developing countires like India, with no commitments on reduction of aggregate measure of suport, would be exempted from reduction in their-de-minimis support and in overall trade distorting support. Furthermore, the developing country members will also be able to continue to benefit from the provisions of providing subsidies on transport and marketing of their agriculture exports till 2018.

The negotiations are proceeding with a view to establish modalities in agriculture by 30 April, 2006, with draft Schedules to be submitted by July 31, 2006, under an overall resolve by WTO Ministers at Hong Kong to complete the Doha Work Programme fully and conclude negotiations in 2006.

The Government has been holding stakeholder consultations to protect and pursue our national interest, in particular the interests of our farmers. Government is committed to intervene in a WTO- compatible manner, including by calibrating the applied tariffs within the bound duties, to protect their interests.

To protect the interests of farmers the Government has also put in place a suitable mechanism for monitoring the imports of sensistive items and are committed to providing adequate protection to domestic producers through WTO compatible measures.
